The World of a Wildlife Photographer

This entertaining lecture spans 35 years of photography and takes us to 5 continents. The questions I am most often asked relate to how to I began – the commissions I have undertaken and the 18 books I have had published. Also how I work and my views on equipment. On the surface it follows the course of my career however, it is actually designed to be an encouraging inspiration for every level of photographer. We touch upon the challenges of working in a strange environment and on subjects that are not familiar. We see the value of attitude and enthusiasm. The whole point is not to make wildlife photography a speciality for the elite but to make it available to anyone with enthusiasm and persistence.

David is an enthusiastic photographer with a great deal of knowledge and experience to share.
